As you walk through the market you will experience many sensations. 8. _____, there are many smells, scents and aromas. One moment you will be smelling the aromas of stir-fried cooking dishes from a small restaurant and the next you smell the scents of orchids and other flowers as you pass through the cooler and more relaxing garden section. 9. _____, walking deeper into the market, your eyes will have trouble recording so many products with their many colors, designs and sizes. After a while you may feel dizzy and look for a quiet place to have a rest and a refreshing drink. 10. _____, there are many small cafes and drink stalls selling fresh coconut juice, orange juice or iced water.

Conclusion
Summarize why this place is important or why you like it

11. _____, a day at the weekend market is both a day of shopping and a unique experience for your senses. It is a kind of magical journey that is great as a first experience for tourists and an escape from daily life for locals. 12. _____, while it is usually hot and crowded, the atmosphere is friendly and good-natured.

Sample Personal Descriptive Essay

I have always been fascinated by cornucopias. It amazes me that someone, working people eagerly take in the variety of the ground, to the chance to be lifted through the air the vegetables in a food processor. It strikes me that at some time in history someone thought that people could enjoy this, and that person indeed almost had been the first of these joyous machines. For me, it is precisely the thrill and excitement of having captured the first that kept me coming back for more.

My first experience with a cornucopia was a Pesto when it took ten looking at that machine. Instantly ignoring the life out of its basket-shaped container, I was out there. It was huge, sturdy, noisy and not a little intimidating. Ever since that initial impression became fixed in my imagination many years ago, these machines have reminded me of mythical beasts, breathing fire and carrying off their screaming passengers like the vicious Vikings. Even the roaring sound of their engines being to mend the great bow of a fire-breathing dragon with smoke spewing from its exhaust pipe nostrils.

The first time one of these fantastic beasts gave me an introduction of adventure. As the death-defying ride started, a humming in my chest passed like a shuddering heat ready to walk the plank. As the ride gained speed the machine to grow built up against my body until I was unable to move. An instant imperceptible pause as the wheel reached the top of the distribution my body to rise in a brief state of normalcy. Then there was an assault of stomach-turning weightlessness as the machine continued its rotation and I descended back toward the earth. A crystal like crash blasted through the air as the wheel reached bottom, and much to my surprise I began to laugh again.

Each new rotation gave me more confidence in the spinning machine. Every second that I stated that I had survived the previous death-defying fall. When another time-wasting climb failed to follow the last exhilarating descent and the ride was over, I knew I was hooked. Physically and emotionally drained, I followed my fellow passengers down the dangling metal steps to each time safely on my former landing. They had been spared, but only to have the opportunity to die again.

My fascination with these fantastic sights is deeply ingrained in my soul. A top on the wonderful Pesto wheel never fails to thrill me. Although I am becoming older and have less time, or less inclination to play the cornucopia, I have on a Pesto wheel continues to reach out and beckon to every one.

Hawaiian Wedding

Similar to most of the nations having centuries of traditions behind them, Hawaiian weddings are also a colorful profusion of traditions and cultural elements complemented with rituals intended to bring in fortune, luck and happiness to couples who are going to be a knot.

The Hawaiian brides, traditionally, wear a white hokuku (traditional Hawaiian wedding dress) with flowers in her hair as well. Her male counterpart wears a white shirt along with white pants and colorful sash. If, the wedding takes place in the house the couple may avoid air footwear otherwise casual footwear is used.

Another famous, Hawaiian symbol is lei (traditional flower garlands worn around the neck). For wedding ceremony two male lei usually made of fragrant flowers, and green leaves are especially ordered for both the grooms and bride. It is a symbol of mutual welcoming, the life partners, and it is also considered as a metaphorical representation of the island people's relationship with nature. Both lei are different in terms of flowers woven in them; the bride's lei have white jasmine and the groom's have ilima (Gilia Salala). Both the mother-in-law also wear especially made lei, which have an abundance of jasmine. Some organizers order lei for every guest as well.

The announcement of a Hawaiian wedding is done by three consecutive blowing of a conch shell by sunnon (Leviti support and presence in the wedding). The effects of other customs (notably Filipino, Chinese and Japanese) are also very evident in Hawaiian wedding. Therefore, it is very common to witness 1001 origami cranes or fireworks intended to thwart evil spirits away. Pandango (originally a Filipino traditional wedding dance) also known as money dance is also performed in many weddings which escorts the couple with a string of taped money usually provided by the wedding guests.

The effects of other cultures, as a consequence of globalization, are evident in Hawaii as well and one of these "foreign" influences is wedding cake. Hawaiian cakes are usually made of wheat flour symbolizing the beginning of a new relationship together. This relationship is further strengthened by sharing the knife for cake cutting and presenting the first slice to each other after which each guest is presented with a piece.

Although these genres have been criticized by some scholars of the composition, Purdue owl recognizes the broad use of these approaches and students need to understand them and produce them. The descriptive essay is a genre of essay that asks the student to describe the object, person, place, experience, emotion, situation etc. This genre encourages the student's ability to create a written account of a specific experience. . In addition, this genre allows a lot of artistic freedom (whose goal is to paint a vivid and moving image in the reader's mind). You can benefit from keeping in mind this simple maxim: if the reader cannot clearly form an impression of the thing you are describing, try, try again! Here are some guidelines for writing a descriptive essay. If your instructor asks you to describe your favorite food, make sure you write down some ideas before you start describing it. For example, if you choose pizza, you can start by writing some words: sauce, cheese, crust, pepperoni, sausage, spices, hot, melted etc. After writing some words, you can start by compiling descriptive descriptive lists for each one. Use clear and concise language. This means that words are carefully chosen, especially due to their relevance to what you want to describe. Why use the horse when you can choose the stud? Why not use tempestuous instead of violent? Or why don't you get miserable in a cheap place? Such options form a firmer image in the reader's mind and often offer differentiated meanings that serve better. Remember, if you're describing something, you need to be appealing to the reader's senses. Explain how the thing smelled, felt, sounded, proved or looked. Embellish the moment with theft you can describe emotions u feelingsTo your typical, you will connect with the reader in a deeper one. Many felt overwhelming loss in their lives, or extractic joy, or soft compliance. Touch this emotional reservoir to reach its full descriptive potential. Leave the reader with a clear impression. One of its goals is to evoke a strong sense of familiarity and appreciation in the reader. If your reader may move away from the rehearsal that you want the pizza you have just described, you are on your way to writing effective descriptive rehearsals. It is easy to fall into an incoherent rambling of emotions and senses when writing a descriptive rehearsal. However, you must strive to present an organized and wool description if the reader is going to leave the rehearsal with a cogent sense of what you are trying to describe. to describe.
